

"The Bread Knife Incident"

This is a true story of a curious incident that occurred at the Rezza last Saturday.

I arrived early and set about getting the RIB out and into the water. Ray Turner arrived and helped with the launch of the RIB. We both then took the RIB for a couple of circuits and tied it up at the jetty as normal. Ray and Sean Russell paired up and had a normal dive. On their return, Ray and I got the RIB onto the trailer. and I operated the winch. As it cleared the water, Ray looked around the RIB. The next I heard was Ray exclaiming, "Who put this bread knife here?"

There was a bread knife, fixed under the RIB rope on the tube. There were no strangers about and no one went near the RIB. Besides, the knife was on the 'rezza side of the RIB'. It could not have been there when I took it from the garage, and was not there when we took it round the Rezza.

Was it the ghost of the old woman who disappeared in the Rezza?

Very spooky!!!!!!!!!!!!

Shark attacks three tourists in Sharm el-Sheikh, Egypt

Attacks by oceanic white tip sharks are extremely rare

Three tourists have been injured by a shark in three separate attacks at the Egyptian resort of Sharm el-Sheikh.

Virtually all water sports have been suspended at the Red Sea resort following the attacks.

One of the tourists is believed to be in a critical conditional in hospital in the Egyptian capital, Cairo.

The authorities are searching for an oceanic white tip shark, which is believed to have carried out the attacks.

They want to capture the shark and release it into the open sea.

The Associated Press news agency quoted a local conservation official, Mohammed Salem, as saying all the victims were Russian.

The suspension of diving and water sports applies to all but a small area around Sharm el-Sheikh.

Attacks by oceanic white tip sharks are extremely rare and shark attacks of any kind are very unusual in the Red Sea.

The BBC Cairo correspondent, Jon Leyne, says it is one of the most popular areas in the world for diving, so a decision to suspend water sports there would not have been taken lightly.

I HEARD THIS ON THE BBC THIS MORNING (02/12/2010) THOUGHT IT MIGHT INTEREST THOSE GOING TO EGYPT NEXT YEAR.
